ITALY ALL EXCITED OVER STATE OF WAR AGAINST AUSTRIA

Active Work Begun in Balkan States to Form League to Assist Russia Against Austria.

Rome, Aug. 15.—The excitement in the Italian capital has become very acute since the existence of the state of war between England and France on one side, and Austria Hungary on the other, was declared.

The Tribune in an article evidently inspired in official quarters emphasizes the fact that Great Britain and Austria did not really declare war on each other, but simply announced that state of war existed by reason of Austria's own act, and that, therefore, Italy is not obliged to assist Austria Hungary.

Most active work is now going on among the governments of the Balkan states to bring about a reconstruction of the former Balkan league which defeated Turkey in the recent war. The committee in New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cleveland, Rochester, Albany, Buffalo and the state of Connecticut and New Jersey.

FIRST BIG VESSEL MAKES CANAL TRIP

Passage of Steamship Ancon is Principal Event Marking Opening of Inter-oceanic Throughfare.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Panama, August 15.—The canal zone celebrated today the opening of the canal. The festivities, however, were but local and suggested little of the international significance of the event. With the official Panama celebration set for next spring, even the United States was not officially represented today except by the men who have long been in the canal zone.

The steamship Ancon owned by the United States war department and leased to the Panama railway for service in the New York-Colon trade, was chosen as the first boat to be put through signaling the opening of the canal to all ships up to 10,000 tons register.

Shortly before seven o'clock this morning the Ancon was drawn away from her berth at Cristobal and anchored at the end of the deep water channel from the Atlantic ocean to the Gatun locks. The program called for putting her through the locks at 9 o'clock, her passage of the Culebra cut at about noon and arrival at the end of the deep water channel in the Pacific at 6 o'clock this evening.

All the 74 regular officers and men aboard the Ancon appeared in spotlessly white uniforms, and the ship itself glistened with new paint over which fluttered signal flags and the ensign of all nations. At the forepeak was the ensign of the Panama republic, while at the main mast head fluttered the pennant of the United States.

Invitations to be guests on this first trip had been much coveted. The United States war department steamer Ancon passed through the Gatun locks without a hitch today in seventy minutes. The total lift at the locks is 85 feet.

The side rails were lined with local canal officials and those of the Panama republic, together with their ladies. As the big steamer backed away from her berth, Colonel George Goethals builder of the canal and governor of the canal zone, was on the bridge beside Captain Sukeforth of the steamer. Other distinguished persons included President Parra of the republic of Panama and his staff.

With the passage of the Ancon through the Canal today the great waterway became "free and open to the vessels of commerce and of war of all nations in terms of entire equality in accordance to the provision of the Hay-Maunefote.

BANCROFT AND DAHL FILE REPORTS LATE

Moran and Sullivan Also Are Delinquent—Are Forced to File Affidavits.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 15.—Former Attorney General J. H. Bancroft, now a candidate for United States senator, was one of the delinquents in the matter of filing expense reports. His statement due Aug. 1 came two days late and he forced to file the report due Aug. 8, thinking it was due one week later. This is a natural mistake where one does not read the law carefully. He was obliged to secure an affidavit from Circuit Judge Stevens of this city as to his lack of intention to violate the law. Andrew H. Dahl, a candidate for governor, through his committee, made the same error. Chairman Ingram's explanation being that Dahl sent the report from Westby and it was delayed in the mails. He filed a judge's certificate as the law allowed and the report accepted. Bancroft's total expenses were $6293 as a candidate, and his committee reported disbursements of $23,46, obligations incurred of $22.53, and contributions of $41.67. Dahl's total disbursements were $783.94, of which $300 was paid for space in the campaign pamphlet. B. N. Moran, of Beloit, Lake County, who is a republican candidate for the assembly, who spent $7.88, and Joseph H. Sullivan of Washburn county, who reported $2.03 spent as a democratic candidate for the assembly, also failed to report on time and filed affidavits to clear themselves.

BARNUM SENTENCED TO GREEN BAY JAIL

Clinton Man Who Stole Watch and Money Here July Fourth Given Year in Green Bay Reformatory.

John Barnum was arraigned in the municipal court this morning on the charge of grand larceny from Thomas Frey on July fourth and pleaded guilty to the charge. Judge Maxfield after questioning Barnum as to the cause of committing the crime gave as punishment to the young man one year in the state reformatory at Green Bay. This is Barnum's first offense and he claimed he committed the theft while under the influence of liquor. He will be taken to the Green Bay institution on Monday by the county authorities.

Frank Hopkins was the only drunk to be arraigned in court and on his plea of guilty drew a fine of five dollars and costs or seven days.

Two negro convicts were arrested by policemen last evening for disorderly conduct but Chief Campion released them on their promise to leave the city for once and for all. The pair gave their names as Daisy Turner and Ella Hubbard and their home at Clinton, Iowa.

One of the colored ladies ventured to remark when questioned by Chief Campion that they were visiting relatives here and expected to leave in the morning. "You will not camp here any longer than it will take to take the first train out," was the instruction given them by Chief Campion and they were escorted to the train and told not to stop.

Side Lights On The Circus Business

By D. W. WATT

While passing the stall of the fast horses at the fair grounds the first of the week, the well paid middle age of life called to me and shook hands, saying: "Dave, don't you remember me?" and while his face looked familiar, the name had gone and I could not place him.

"Well," he said, "I was a kid and lived in Janesville they called me Andy Connors, and you are the man that put me in the show business. I applied to you down at the Spring black winter quarters of the Burr Robbins show for a job taking care of ponies, and you said to me, 'Young man, you are too young to travel in the show, and even though you have been much to you down at the Spring, but that you could do around a circus, but finally after talking matters over, I was put to work. When the show started on the road we were given a pony on the drive over the road. That season we went through the far west and it was many an all night drive over the prairies of Kansas and Nebraska, that I thought it would be impossible for me to make it, but I can't recall that you never passed me in the night that you did not call out to me and say, 'How are you getting along, kid? Are you all right?' Now this possibly did not mean much to you, but to me it meant a great deal. I really thought that you had taken an interest in me and was looking after me in a personal way. I never have forgotten the interest that you took in me the first season that I was in the business. But, Mr. Watt, I have been around many a circus since that time. I have traveled from California to Maine, and only left the Ringling show last week to come back to my old home and spend a week at the fair, and take a look at the fast trotters and pacers, which I have always been interested in."

Andy Connors years ago was a high class driver, one of the long team kind as they are known in the business, and he could mount one of the high wagons and pick up the lines over eight or ten horses with as much accuracy and ease as a single pair. These are the kind of drivers that are always in demand with the big shows, and Andy expects to return next week and join the Ringling show, as for the balance of the season.

A character in show business far different from the average man was in Janesville this week entertaining the thousands who attend the fair. This man is W. H. Brock, who has been out and for many years has made his home in Chicago. Mr. Du Brock was raised in Tennessee, and his father was a dry goods merchant there for many years. While his father's business, this, the younger of the brothers, could not settle down to that kind of a life, but the horses and the bounds seemed to be his hobby from his boyhood days.

This young man's first venture in the show business was to start out a minstrel show, which did not prove to be a financial success, and after losing a few thousand dollars in this business, closed the show and later opened up a dry goods store in Chicago, but this did not prove to be his liking. It was only a short time till he sold out and went to Wyoming where for a time he settled on a ranch.

About eight years ago, Mr. Du Brock started out a wild west show from Wyoming and went directly east and opened at Long Island, where he made considerable money.

The following season he came back to Chicago and opened at Riverview Park, where he gave them an up-to-date Wild West Show, and called it the "Overland Train Robbery."

The following winter he went east again to New Jersey. From New Jersey he came back west and organized a large wild west show, and gave as one of the features, "General Custer's Last Battle."

This did not prove much of a success and about this time Mr. Du Brock opened a riding school at Edgewater, a north western town. This riding school has always proved a money maker. This season so far has been one of the best that he has ever had. At present he has seventy-two horses in his stables at this place. He had a manager and many caretakers at his riding academy which will run until late in the fall.

All Mr. Du Brock's horses and hounds are trained at his quarters in Chicago, and all his dates are filled up until late in the fall. Mr. Du Brock's wife and two children travel with him, and from Janesville they go back to Chicago for one week, and from there go direct to St. Joe, Mo., to the state fair, from St. Joe to Des Moines, Ia., from Des Moines to Minneapolis, then to Milwaukee, Springfield, and from there to Little Rock, Ark. In all probability Mr. Du Brock's riding academy at Edgewater, in Chicago, and his Wild West and high class horses on the road will be two enterprises which he will carry on permanently for some time.

His running horses are high class, and the five eight mile races on Wednesday over the half mile track was the fastest ever made in this part of the country even in the palmiest days of the fast runners.

After the death of Colonel H. Harris, husband of Madam Marantette, who had been her life partner for more than thirty years, the Madam seemed to think there was but little more for her to work for. She went direct to her home in Mendon, Michigan, and a few days ago Mr. Du Brock bought the entire outfit of Madam Marantette, and added her high class horses and other features to his already great show.

Mr. Du Brock has twelve of his famous horses here which three years ago took part in grand opera opening in Chicago in the "Girl of the Golden West."

In this production Mr. Du Brock furnished sixteen broaches and sixteen high class riders for the entire season, and for his services alone received a salary of $500 per week.

In this grand opera production in the first scene there were four horses grazing at the foot of a mountain, and a famous spotted pony, which was here on the fair grounds, would come down the side of the mountain and at first sight of the other horses would whinny to them. This was accomplished by holding a hidden looking glass in front of the pony so that he could see his own picture, and then he would never forget, but it takes long hard work and a world of patience to make these things possible.

On Thursday morning I had been detained just a minute to shake hands with Harry Earl, press representative for the Ringlings, and he is here for the first time to announce their coming on September 3rd. This will give you time to get ready for the great holiday.

Friday evening closed the greatest all feature fair ever held in Janesville. Records were broken in many of the races and everything in the line of attraction was of the highest order. The DuBrock shows, with their high school horses, their polo teams and fast runners were all of the highest order, and some of them were constantly before the people until the last bell was tapped.

Mr. DuBrock is a hard, conscientious worker and always ready to do a job that his contract calls for. Should the DuBrock come this way again, they will surely receive a warm welcome from Janesville and Rock county people.

In this department Professor West will answer all questions on agricultural and garden matters each Saturday. As year interest in the department develops, a more frequent insertion of the queries and answers will be made. Address all communications signed with your name, to the Agricultural Department, Gazette. Your name will be withheld, if desired. If personal answer is also desired, enclose self addressed stamped envelope.

(By Allen B. West.)

Dear Sir: I have been interested in your answers to questions in the Gazette. My greatest problem this year has been the curculio on the plum trees. I have a green gage that they have a special fondness for. The tree is healthy and was full of fruit until I noticed the plums had been stung by the curculio that caused nearly all of the fruit to drop off. I sprayed the tree with arsenate of lead, but perhance I didn't do it at the right time. I wondered if the tree, tangledfoot would be of any benefit, or does the curculio fly? I should be greatly obliged if you would help me out on this problem.

Yours sincerely, Edna Shopbell. It is of course now too late in the season to do anything to stop the damage done to the plum trees this year, but now is the time to lay plans for next year. Tangledfoot will not help in this case for as intimated in the above letter, curculio flies, there is one way recommended to get rid of them by mechanical means which will apply where the owner of the plum tree has trees in the poultry yard, as often the case. Go out early in the morning and gently shake the trees. This will cause the curculios to fall. If there is dew they cannot fly, for the dampness affects their wings, rendering them helpless. The chickens take advantage of this and before the dew has dried their wings they have made a fine breakfast for the fowls.

The damage to the plums described above may be from the curculio, or it may be from the plum borer. The remedy for both these pests is the same and is arsenate of lead. It should be applied three times to make sure of getting all the curculios. The first time, before the petals open; second, after the petals fall; and third, ten days later.

An ounce of lead of arsenate in two gallons of water is the right proportion and should be applied in a fine spray, covering the leaves and buds thoroughly.

It is worth the same time to spray with Bordeaux mixture for fungus diseases. Plum trees are susceptible to shot-hole fungus and kindred diseases and when one is spraying one may as well use the two mixtures together. In this case instead of using the lead arsenate in two gallons of water it may be used in two gallons of the Bordeaux mixture.

Last week the question about oats susceptible to damage from lodging was answered. Since that time a letter from R. A. Moore of the University of Wisconsin has been received, recommending Wisconsin No. 1 and 60-day oats. These oats have short stems and have been bred with special reference to Wisconsin conditions, and are recommended to be sown where there is liability of lodging.

WISCONSINI PLANS MAIL INSTRUCTION

Madison, Wis., Aug. 15.—To determine the relative effectiveness of correspondence methods of instruction as compared with residence study, the state board of public affairs is today conducting a survey of education by the correspondence method. The correspondence work of the university has grown to be one of the largest activities of the institution. Reports show that during the past school year 6,323 students took correspondence courses from the university. These courses are disseminated from six different centers, making it possible to gather the correspondence of certain localities into classes and bring them into touch with the instructor. If a student is too far removed from these centers to take advantage of the class lessons, he does the work assigned, sending it to the university where the instructor in charge makes suggestions and returns the copy. It is the object of the present inquiry to determine what are the inherent advantages of the correspondence method of instruction, and whether the students taking the correspondence courses are as serious in their work as residence students. It will also be determined whether the ability of the instructor to judge by correspondence, whether the student is fitted for the line of study which he is pursuing is unhindered. A long list of questions has been answered by the board, delving into every phase of the correspondence work.

JOE JACKSON TOPS AMERICAN WITH .358

Meyers Batting in Twenty Games Leads National With .371—Brooklyn Leads in Club Batting.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, August 15.—Hi Meyers, wearing Brooklyn's uniform in twenty games, leads the batters of the National League with an average of .371 according to figures published today. Then come Erwin, Brooklyn, .343; Grant, New York, .342; Becker, Philadelphia, .334; Dalton, Brooklyn, .331; Burns, New York, .321; Wingo, St. Louis, .310; Daubert, Brooklyn, .308; S. Magee, Philadelphia, .308; Phelan, Chicago, .304. Brooklyn leads in club batting with .293 and New York is next with .286. Herzog, Cincinnati, is ahead in stolen bases with 36. In games won and lost, James of Boston, with 15 and 5; Doak, St. Louis, 12 and 4; Mathewson, New York, 19 and 7, are leading pitchers.

Jackson tops the American Leaguers. The Cleveland slugger has an average of .358. Next come Cobb, Detroit, .350; E. Collins, Philadelphia, .345; Baker, Philadelphia, .335; Crege, Cleveland, .331; Speakers, Boston, .329; Crawford, Detroit, .317; Fourrier, Chicago, .315; McInnes, Philadelphia, .312; C. Walker, St. Louis, .303. Philadelphia with 267 and Washington with 242 lead the clubs in leading pitchers are Leonard, Boston, with 17 and 3; Bender, Philadelphia 10 and 2; and Plank, Philadelphia 13 and 3.

John Titus holds the lead in the American Association. The Kansas City veteran's average is .338. Following him are W. Hinchman, Columbus, .323; Kirke, Cleveland, .349; Altizer, Minneapolis, .342; Compton, Kansas City, .340; Rath, Kansas City, .339; Miller, Minneapolis, .335; Livingston, Indianapolis, .333; Lake, Minneapolis, .327; V. Clemons, Louisville, .325. Ahead in team hitting are Kansas City with 273 and Minneapolis and Columbus with 273 each.

Compton and Kilgus are tied for stolen base honors with 40 each. Leading pitchers are Dougherty, Milwaukee, with 10 and 2; Gallia, Kansas City, with 19 and 5; and Laro, Indianapolis, 11 and 4.

Steve Evans, Brooklyn, tops the Federal Leaguers with .362. Then come Kauff, Indianapolis, .355; Shaw, Brooklyn, .346; Lennox, Pittsburgh, .341; Randall, St. Louis, .339; Campbell, Indianapolis, .326; Carr, Indianapolis, .324; F. Miller, St. Louis, .319; Murphy, Brooklyn, .318. Indianapolis leads in club batting with .280 and Baltimore is next with .274. Kauff retains the stolen base honors with 46. Top notch pitchers are Ford, Buffalo, 15 and 5; Seaton, Brooklyn, 20 and 2; Brown, St. Louis, 11 and 5; Kaiserling, Indianapolis, 11 and 6.

Larry Lejeune, Sioux City, leads the Western with .392. The 302; Jordan, Toronto, .313. Providence with 272 and Toronto with 260 lead in club batting. Pick, Toronto, with 34, has most stolen bases. Leading pitchers are Bader, Buffalo, and Wagner, Toronto, with 9 and 2 each; and Hughes, Rochester, with 15 and 6.

Pete Knisely's departure from the Southern League, where he hit .352 from Birmingham, leaves Tris Lord, Mobile, and Liehardt, Memphis, the leaders with .330 each. Then come Kirby, Mobile, .328; McCormick, Chattanooga, .325; Daly, Montgomery, .317; Goulat, Memphis, .314; Sloan, Chattanooga, .312; Welchance, Atlanta, .308. Tris Lord, Atlanta, .308. Atlanta leads in team hitting with .267 and Chattanooga is next with .265. Caffa, Nashville, retains the stolen base lead, with 48. Leading pitchers are Harg, Mobile, with 18 won and 4 lost; Brown, Birmingham, with 15 and 7, and Townsend, Mobile, 14 and 7.

Daily Thought.

They say that walls have ears. May these four walls of ours hear only laughter and kindly speech.—Myrtle Reid.

UNABLE TO REMATCH MAHONEY AND SCOTTY

Scotty May Appear in Beloit Bout Against Bud Corbett in Semi-Wind-Up.

Evidently Kid Mahoney has had enough of young Scotty, the Jones Island fisherman, for efforts to rematch the pair even at Racine have resulted in no encouragement from Mahoney. Mahoney expressed no small surprise at the ability of Scotty and made negative replies when Promoter Ibrigh tried to sign the pair up for another match.

The showing of Scotty has advanced him to the front of Wisconsin featherweights and he should have no trouble in securing a number of good matches this season. Scotty may appear at the Beloit opening show against Bud Corbett in the semi-wind-up, but it is doubtful if Corbett would care to meet the Jones Islander for eight rounds as Scotty knocked out Young Sharkey who held Corbett to two good draws. One of Milwaukee, challenged the winner and a match between him and Scotty is likely to result. Ritchie Mitchell, probably the best light man in the state, will make a good match for Scotty, but Mitchell is fast approaching the lightweight class and it is doubtful if he can make 123 pounds. Mitchell is a classy fighter and Scotty would have trouble in holding him. Manning Vaughn, sporting scribe of the Milwaukee Sentinel, arises to remark that it was with surprise that Scotty held Mahoney to a draw. Such is impossible for Mahoney never lost a fight in his life and always shaded his opponent, at least that is what Mahoney says.

There is one thing certain, as shown by Wednesday's bout, that Scotty is able to stand all Mahoney's punches without a jar, for the Jones Islander stepped right swing regularly and never backed up, but chased Mahoney all during the ten rounds. Scotty declared after the fight that when he found Mahoney could not hurt him he didn't attempt to guard off the blows, as he was willing to take one in order to get inside Mahoney's defense.

Sport Snap Shots

Joe Jackson, the Nap Slugger, is going barnstorming with his brothers this fall. The Jacksons, which is the name of the family, of course, and will be the name of the team, expect to beat most all they oppose. Joe declares that it's a fast bunch. And they can certainly claim the world's championship for an all-time ball team. Jackson has five brothers, all of them speedy ball players, and with three first cousins they will have a complete lineup. Joe and Dave Jackson are outfielders; Ernest and Earl, the twins, play first and second base respectively and respectfully, and Luther and Jerry play short and third. Pinky Jackson, a cousin on the mother's side, who lives a piece down the road at home, can't get out the infield, and Wade, his brother, will pitch. There is still the backstopping job to fill, but Joe feels sure that he will be able to find a first-rate catcher among his many other cousins. The team will tour the south, where small independent clubs are many and where barnstorming flourishes.

Jimmy Clabby, the Hammond, Ind., pug, returning from Australia to his own United States, brings with him quite a list of titles. While in Australia parts Jimmy fought and licked almost every fighter they could find to oppose him, and in that way he has become the middle-light-heavy and heavyweight champion of Australia. Clabby is one of the best of the middleweights here at home. But it would seem absurd of him to enter into the heavy class here, his best weight being around 145 pounds. Just how he managed to get away with the heavyweight stuff in Australia is not clear at present. But if he insisted upon showing the honor upon him he would have been foolish to refuse it. It is to be hoped, though, that he doesn't take his heavyweight title too seriously. If he should undertake to fight with some of the more presentable of the American heavies he would probably regret it. Clabby will no doubt prefer to be known as a middleweight elsewhere than in Australia.

Billy Friel, manager of the St. Paul American Association team, had not taken active part in a ball game for many years. But one day not so long ago one of his players was unable to perform. Friel is carrying so few players that he didn't have a man to fill the place, and so he went in himself. Old fans were pleased beyond measure to see the old boy cavorting about as in the old days. And he carried on like a kid. He got a triple and a single at bat and scored three runs. In fact, he had so much pep that he won the game quite alone, something that his team could not have been able to do for some time. It would seem that Billy had better plan to take a regular place in the St. Paul lineup.

NEW PITCHER WILL HURL HERE SUNDAY

Cards Will Try to Chase Old Jinx of Playing Poor Game Before a Large Crowd Sunday.

The fair being over, baseball fans in the city will have their attention drawn to the coming game between the Janesville Cardinals and the Newark Giants at the Association Park diamonds Sunday afternoon. Newark has disputed the Cardinals' claim to the title of southern Wisconsin and so the only way to settle it was to have them fight it out on Sunday.

A new twirler will appear on the mound for the Cardinals, as Crandall is out of the state and the fans of the city are anxious to look him over against the invading Giants. For the visitors a southpaw will do the twirling and as the Cards remember him he has considerable smoke that he fanned eighteen batters when the two teams clashed last year at Orderville. A tight battle is expected and the Cards will attempt to disprove their old jinx of being unable to play a good game before a large crowd.

HE BRINGS TERROR TO PIRATE HEARTS

"Rabbit" Maranville.

It is extremely fortunate for the Pittsburgh Pirates that they do not have to play against "Rabbit" Maranville of the Boston Braves often. More than 22 times per season, else their percentage would be much lower than it now is. Maranville has batted at a .397 clip in the combats with the Corsairs this year, having procured 25 hits in 63 times at bat.

WISCONSIN FOOTBALL DOPE ENCOURAGING

Juneau and Wilson Wait for Sept. 15th, When Big Season Opens at Madison.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Aug. 15.—Wisconsin football candidates will assemble in Madison one month hence to prepare for the preliminary work for the 1914 Big Nine season. Tom Wilson, Princeton star, will make his bow to the western football world as assistant coach. He is expected to make a capable helpmate to Bill Juneau.

In 1912 Wilson made Walter Camp's all-American eleven. Last year he coached the University of North Carolina. Coach Juneau faces one gratifying condition this year: that is that about all the men who are sure of a place on the team are eligible so far as scholastic rules are concerned. According to Bill Richardson, who remains in intimate touch with all the football men, past and prospective, the Badger line will be a top-notch again, with such men as Captain Keeler, Gelein and Buck back, and with McMaster, Schmidt, Ambler and Kennedy of the reserves available. Mucks, the Oshkosh heavyweight, who represented America at the Stockholm Olympic; Simpson of Oshkosh, and Gardiner, the Ashland lad, who took individual honors in the intercollegiate track and field meet two years ago, are additional promising material for the line fortifications. Mucks will probably be tried at center. If he makes good there, as the coaches have every reason to think he will, and with Keeler and Gelein as guards and Buck and Simpson as tackles the Badger line ought to be as powerful as any that has represented the schools in years.

The backfield problem is less easy of solution, as only Bellows and Cummings of last year's men will be back. With his one year's training at quarter, Bellows is expected to prove of real championship caliber, provided his kicking is as good as it was last year. He will have opposition for the job in Taylor Kessenich and Booth and McGregory, last year's freshman captain. The first three were heard from more or less favorably last year. Bellows, however, many think, will have the call for the quarterback position.

Leo Cummings of Phillips looks good for a halfback job, and A. C. Weirnat, La Crosse, has a good chance to break into the game. Louis Berger, who is now in the war zone in Europe, is much sought after by the coaches. It is hoped he will be back in time for Captain Tandberg's place at fullback the field is open for the best man. Some sophomore will probably be discovered to take his place. Kretz of Menominee, Mich., is a favorite with some, and Rod Clayton has a chance if he rejoins the squad. End material is scarce this year. Sivrum, Albright, Mitchell and Tomasek are mentioned. The latter gained experience on the St. Paul central high school team.

W. T. Greene, Hopkinton, N. H., writes the following letter, which will interest every one who has kidney trouble. "For over a year, Mrs. Greene had been afflicted with a very stubborn kidney trouble. An operation was advised. This I would not consent to. Foley Kidney Pills done more to complete her recovery than any medicine she has taken and I feel it my duty to recommend Foley Kidney Pills to all who need kidney medicine." They are tonic in action, quick to give good results. W. T. Sherer.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

Probably one of the bits of advice Adam handed to his children was: "The middle way is the safest." At any rate, so far back that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, this proverb has been in use, ever respected by the old, even disregarded by the young.

When Socrates was asked to give in a nutshell the gist of his philosophy, he answered: "Nothing too much."

The famous prayer prayer of Agur was: "Lord, give me neither poverty nor riches!"

All creation is a balance of forces. Happiness, success, religion are forms of balance.

Joy is not a solid thing like a stone or house; it is a moving, going product, like a bicycle or a spinning top. It is not something you can get, or that any one can give you; it is an art that you can learn. Says Katherine Tynan:

"I thank God when I kneel to pray That mine is still the middle way, Set in a safe and sweet estate Between the little and the great, Not troubled with wealth's cares, nor yet Too poor, where needs that cark and fret Push out sweet leisure and green nooks And give no chance for talk and books."

—Dr. Frank Crane in Woman's World for July.

One of the trite sayings of President Lincoln was, that "God must have loved the common people, because he made so many of them."

"Neither poverty nor riches," just the well-beaten path known as the "middle way" is the great highway where the rank and file of humanity travel from the cradle to the tomb.

This happy average, which falls to the lot of so many people, means more than wealth, or a fat bank account, especially in this fair land, where every man is a sovereign, and the creator of his own destiny.

It is said of every city as well as of every commonwealth that the people have just the kind of government that they want, because they have the making of it in their own hands, and can do with it what they will.

This is true, to large extent, the only exception being when the people get careless, as they did in Wisconsin, a few years ago, when they turned the state over to a handful of agitators and designing politicians and sacrificed independence to gratify personal ambition. But time is the great regulator, and the hoodwinked people never fail in regaining normal vision, as they are now doing in the Badger state.

A similar mistake was made on a larger scale, when the destiny of the nation was placed in the hands of the democratic party by a minority vote, two years ago, but the blunders already made are so apparent that the mistake is not likely to be repeated, two years hence.

If the nation ever needed a diplomat and a statesman in the responsible office of secretary of state, it needs him today when questions of the most grave importance are of hourly occurrence. While no one questions Mr. Bryan's integrity, his ability to cope with the situation is on a par with the ability of Secretary Daniels of the navy department, who advocates transforming our navy into a fleet of merchant marine boats for commercial purposes.

We, the common people, who travel the "middle way," are responsible for these deplorable conditions, and we added either directly or indirectly, bringing them about, and while our sympathies go out to President Wilson in his hour of sad bereavement—when already burdened down with care—the problem of party inefficiency is still with us, and its solution is none the less menacing.

The people of this country are not essentially different from the people of all other countries. The great mass of humanity are common people, all over the world. They are peace-loving people as well as when the smoke of battle clears away it will be found that the people are not responsible for the war which now curses the nations of the old world.

It is possible that out of the blood and sacrifice may dawn a new world's era, and from the twentieth century may date a civilization, which means more than a peace conference because of the freedom of thought and action which comes through human independence.

It is an old saying that every brain is tinged with a strain of some sort of insanity, and while only the violent cases find asylum in the hospitals and sanitariums, that the great multitude at large continues to be a menace to society.

While this statement may seem broad of the truth, the fact remains that the middle of the road is often deserted by fanatics and over-zealous reformers whose enthusiasm borders on lunacy.

In the political realm this mania assumes various forms. Some of its victims become hysterical reformers, while others advocate the equal distribution of property. When it attacks statesmen of the Bryan and La Follette type an epidemic of free silver or sympathy for God's patient poor, breaks out, and results in all sorts of mischief, because so many of the "middle of the road" people are surface thinkers, and easily influenced.

When the religious world is invaded all sorts of fanaticism develops and the Holy Jumper rivals his more sedate brother who struggles under a load of holiness which he calls sanctification. The religious fanatic, of whatever faith, is a victim of emotionalism, and comes the nearest to being unbalanced in mind of any class of wayfarers at large.

The deserters from the great highway are not so numerous as to seriously deplete the ranks, and so the column moves steadily forward. The nation and the state are simply multiple units of individual units, and while mistakes are sometimes made, through error in judgment, the common-sense of the common people usually corrects them in time to prevent disaster.

The kingdom within us is the most important of any domain, because it is the one kingdom over which we have absolute control. The human will, directed by a heart inspired by the God within us, is capable of marshaling the forces of right, and winning victory from every attack.

The journey of life is easier today for weary pilgrims, than it was half a century ago, because the burdens are lighter and more generously shared by fellow travelers.

An army of Americans is stranded today in the lands of strife beyond the sea, but treasure in liberal amount is already speeding and their relief, while the Red cross Societies of every land are rushing and the aid of sufferers on every battle field.

There are times when the great beast of humanity beats at the heart of one man, and when minor differences are forgotten. If the war cloud now covering the old world, has a semblance of silver lining, it may be discovered in the widespread sympathy extended by the American people.

The middle of the road is a popular highway, and never better equipped than today because so many of the pilgrims have come and realize that life at the best means helpfulness and sacrifice.

FINE YOUTHS HELD

FOR "POCKETKETS"

Unable to Find Actual Proof of Crime

Pair Held as "Dips," the Chief Charges Them With Vagrancy.

William Golden and Edward Grady, two suspects held by Chief of Police, charged with the theft of the purse, at the Fair Grounds Thursday morning, and each fined $25. The chief said the reading of the guilty verdict, no evidence could be obtained against the pair for larceny from the person and they were fined the maximum amount and told to leave the city. The chief said the pair had been in the city long enough to catch the first Chicago train.

Chief of Police refused to allow the two to go free and put the vagrancy charge against them as he was certain Grady and Golden, and Golden, alias Simon, were two of the gang that stole money from the fair spectators at the grand stand entrance. Both left the city, it was reported, on the morning Chicago train.

Yesterday afternoon the police searched the crowds for the well-dressed woman whom it is thought Grady duplicated in the Hessemer robbery, but no trace of her or her companion could be found. They probably left the city soon after stealing the money. Yesterday employees at the fair grounds found a number of discarded empty wall-bellows behind one of the exhibition halls. Evidently left there by the "dips" after the money had been extracted.

Last evening a man residing near Men phoned to Chief of Police that he had lost his purse containing $26 at the Chicago and Northwestern station Thursday evening as he was boarding the train. The purse was not passed until he arrived at home and he thought possibly he might have lost the money. He read of the other robberies at the fair grounds and the man complained to the police in hopes that the two arrested had stolen the money. An empty pocketbook answered the description of the money left behind by the African man was found in the toilet room of the station last night.

Losses were reported to the police from people attending yesterday's fair.

ALL ARE SATISFIED

AT FAIR SUCCESS

GREAT SHOWING FOR FIRST YEAR DESERVES HIGHEST COMMENDATION.

CITIZENS TAKE PRIDE

Entire City Appreciated Efforts of Fair Management—Will Publish List of Prize-winners.

General satisfaction at the great success of the Janesville fair was expressed on every side today and the management came in for its share of deserved congratulation. The work of arranging for the exhibition was and owing to the fact that it was the first year making it necessary to blade a new trail all along the line with the exception of the race program. New buildings, necessary improvements, tracks and grounds and other details called for large expenditures and although the association received liberal stock subscriptions the drain on the treasury was much larger than it will be in subsequent years.

It is some days before the books will be in shape so as to ascertain the financial standing of the association as a result of the fair, but the fact that there will be a substantial balance with which to make plans for the next fair.

The fact that every citizen of Janesville took pride in the fair and joined in boosting it is a great credit to the fair. It has never been boosted before, was significant in insuring the success. Rock county farmers, whose exhibit was the excellence of the display are also proud of the fair. They are ready to co-operate in every way possible to build up the finest fair in the state for Janesville.

Farmers, stock dealers and breeders are unanimous in their verdict that no better showing of stock was ever seen at any fair not excepting Milwaukee. The parade of the prize-winning cattle, horses and ponies on the race track yesterday afternoon was enough to convince the skeptical, if there were any such, that stock-racers were ready to make the Janesville show a big success.

In other departments the competition was keen and the superintendents were most gratified at the showings made. They received the compliments of hundreds of visitors who were pleased with the displays. In the floral and fine arts department, always a crowd of admiring spectators and the superintendents report that every article exhibited was returned safely to the owners at the close of the fair.

The judges were enthusiastic at the showing and their work required the best of their skill and judgment. The list of prize-winners will be published in the Gazette as soon as it can be placed in shape.

Credit is due the board of directors for the able manner in which they handled the various departments and the consensus of opinion of the fair was that the board had done a great deal for the fair. The board has come to stay and will in the future be one of the annual events to look forward to. Every article on exhibition was accounted for including the meeting of the board in the fine arts hall, which was most beautiful. General satisfaction of the various exhibitors means bigger displays next year and in so much as the live stock grounds deal for holding a fair, it is high and dry, well drained and easy of access from all parts of the city. The automobiles that piled to and from the fair grounds and the fact that no accidents occurred to mar the pleasure of the week shows that care was taken by pedestrians and auto drivers. The time was exceptional and the management is to be congratulated on the excellence of the service.

TWO GIRLS DEPART

WITH FAIR COMPANY

Ruth Wheelock and Genette Fellows Missing From Home Since Thursday Afternoon.

Complaint was made to the police last evening by parents of Ruth Wheelock, age fourteen years and Genette Fellows, fifteen years, that the two girls have runaway with the DubRocq company that gave exhibitions at the fair last week. The two girls have been missing from their home since Thursday afternoon and it is thought they have left for the amusement company as they had expressed intention of departing to see the world. The Wheelock girl lives with her mother, Mrs. J. J. Greighton, at 514 West Blue st. One of the girls was seen at the fair Thursday afternoon about four o'clock talking with one of the employees of the DubRocq company and it is possible the police may locate the girls at Mineral Point where the company will exhibit this week.

Janesville Player Makes Wonderful Showing at State Meet Despite Defeat—Big Match Today.

Al. Schaller of this city entered in the state golf tournament in Milwaukee this week, lost to Price M. Davis in their match, early yesterday morning, and lost all possible chances to compete further for the Badger title. The elimination of Guilbert by Zwaska, Zwaska by Allis, Schaller by Davis, Davis by Cavanaugh, leaves Cavanaugh and Allis to play for the big title today. Cavanaugh, three times Wisconsin golf champion, is the favorite in the match.

The 2:30 and three-year-old trots and the 2:15 pace yesterday afternoon closed highly successful racing program of the Janesville Fair association. Although the fields were not as large as on Thursday nevertheless the heats were fast and exciting and with ideal conditions the large gallery was fully satisfied. Two thousand spectators were in the grandstand and fully that number more strung along the track.

The two courses showed little effect of the hard usage underwent during the opening days and horsemen were fully satisfied with the results. The 2:30 pace on the half mile track in the first race of the day's program. The Schloss horse took three straight heats, the best time being 2:18 1/2.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

IRRITATING OPTIMISM.

"SHE is irritatingly optimistic," I overheard someone say of a woman the other day. The expression was promptly picked up and criticized. "There cannot be too much optimism," the critic said. "Do you agree? I don't."

Optimism is a very beautiful thing, but like all good things there can be too much of it. "Too much of a good thing" is a byword in our language. It is a peculiar reflection of the Greek motto which I am so fond of quoting. "Nothing in excess."

RUTH CAMERON

Someone, Stevenson, I think, has said, "The habit of looking on the bright side is worth a thousand pounds a year." And so it is, but he did not say, "The habit of looking only on the bright side." Optimism is fashionable just now and like all fashionable things is frequently carried to excess. And to my way of thinking, at least, people who affect the persistent, unreasoning optimism are irritating and antagonizing rather than cheering and soothing.

A pessimist is a person who has to live with optimism. It is the contribution of a confirmed cynic, but I am not so sure that it is wide of the mark. Naturally I am strongly inclined to optimism, but when I rub up against one of these ultra fashionable optimists I find myself inclining toward pessimism. For instance, in the presence of one of them, whose carefully preserved, flawless cheerfulness somehow reminds me of a pink and white enameled complexion, I happened to remark one day (after a week of drizzle, fog, cold winds and general gloom) that the people who had taken their vacation at that time must be disappointed with the weather, and that I myself was much depressed by it. "Why yesterday was a lovely day," she said (we had had a few hours of equivocal sunshine, and it hasn't rained hard but once or twice. You must look on the bright side.)

I longed to say, "Don't be foolish, you know perfectly well it has been miserable weather." But denied this pleasure by rules of polite society I took refuge in being just as pessimistic as I liked, which was a good deal more so than I would otherwise have been.

Another variety of optimists who induce pessimism in those who have to live with them are those whose optimism runs wild and makes them confuse hopes with possibilities. It's all very well to hope that the thing you want won't cost more than you can afford, but when an optimist takes such a hope as a basis of action he needs a pessimist nearby to put the curb on.

An unreasoning optimism makes a good moral for a sermon, or basis for a story, but in real life it ought to be mixed with enough common sense to keep its feet on the ground.

sunshine, not only to others, but to its members. You can have good times, too, by giving a party now and then and inviting the boys and any other friends you wish to entertain.

(3) There's nothing nicer than sandwiches and pickles, nice cake and lemonade or some cool drink for summertime. When the days get cold, hot chocolate may be served.

Two men looked out from prison bars. The one saw mud, the other stars.

Get into the habit of looking for the silver lining of the cloud, and when you have found it, continue to look at it rather than the leaden gray in the middle. It will help you over many hard places.

Sunday is too often the hardest day of all the week for the housewife, when it should be the day of rest. In many homes the Sunday dinner is planned with the idea of making the day as restful as possible, getting everything ready the day before. Even the meat may be roasted and served reheated, the salad made, the dessert made, and when it is time for the meal it may be quickly served, leaving an afternoon of leisure.

Monday, if the laundry work is done at home, which is the case in a great majority of homes, and by the house mother herself, should be a day of easy meals. When possible the meal that comes next may be partly prepared while the previous meal is being cleared away. For example, if hashed brown potatoes are to be served for supper or dinner, get them ready and put them in the icebox ready for cooking at the dinner hour.

Cucumbers cut in eighths and cooked in water until tender and served in a cream sauce are a delicious change when cucumbers are plentiful. These may be prepared ready for cooking and will be a tasty dish to serve with or on toast.

Dishes of cheese, such as souffles, are always welcome and are easily and quickly prepared.

Stewed tomatoes with rice, tomatoes stuffed with buttered crumbs and baked, rice with cheese are some of the ways to prepare a good dish and in little time.

The chafing dish is an oasis in the life of a busy woman for many dainty dishes may be served from it, and they are always a delight.

Steaks and chops are meats that are quickly prepared and should be a busy woman's resource on full days. Meats may be reheated, not so with egg and cheese dishes; they are made tough and indigestible when reheated.

A handful of vegetables left over will often give a plain soup an entirely different flavor.

Peggy & Company

XLVII. Peggy Adopts a Ruse to Escape the Strenuous Life.

Was there ever such a spirited young man as Mr. Todd? It just seems as if Peggy says, that he isn't content to sit quietly a minute. And so light hearted and witty! He is forever saying comic things and carrying on. As Peggy asked him the other day, "Is he never a serious moment?" The exact words of his prompt reply we have forgotten, but they were very funny.

Mr. Todd has been very popular in the younger set with his flow of spirits and his handsome though modest bearing. The girls all declare that Peggy should be pleased that he shows her such decided partiality. And Peggy is quite pleased indeed and colors prettily and even forgets for the moment the fatigue his athletic stunts have caused her.

Today Mr. Todd has the cleverest idea. He has proposed that they have a mixed doubled tennis match and nothing will do but Peggy must be his partner. Peggy feels pretty staid still, but so many girls would be flattered to be Mr. Todd's partner that she can't think of refusing. She enters the thing with no great enthusiasm, however, feeling that she will be too ashamed after a few trots over the court to wield her racket.

Mr. Todd has declared that he will provide a prize for the winning team. All laugh merrily at this, because Mr. Todd may be depended on to have something ridiculous and original in the way of a prize. He further asserts that as Peggy and he are sure to win, the prize is to be a very handsome one, whereas the merriment is unbounded. Mr. Todd's little conceits are irresistible.

Things take a more serious turn, however, when Peggy with a little cry of pain sinks in a heap on the court. She seems to have sprained her ankle. It is very stupid of the others as they help her home not to discern that she has no leopards' life, you chide yourself for this little trick—but do you quit it? In justice to your home and family you should.

If to the words system and management you add the word friction with the idea firmly in mind of eliminating all possible friction from your business of running your home you will have taken a long step in the right direction. THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

If you have a chimney that does not draw well, open the windows in the room for ten minutes before the fire is lighted and see if that will not help the draft.

To make the windows bright and shining, add a small quantity of bluing to the water when you are washing them.

In washing delicate laces never use starch, but if a slight staining is desired two lumps of sugar in a basin of warm water will give all that is needed.

Sheets of tinfoil placed under dolls upon which glasses, pitchers or vases of water are set will prevent the dampness from soaking through and staining polished tables.

THE TABLE.

Fried Tomatoes, Virginia Style.—Tomatoes, cayenne pepper, butter, crumbs, sugar, salt. Select medium-size, ripe tomatoes—not too ripe. With a sharp knife remove the thin outside slice, top and bottom, then cut each tomato into two thick slices. Place on a paper and cover each slice with cracker crumbs, a little sugar, salt and cayenne pepper. Then dot over with bits of butter; next place in frying pan which contains hot drippings. Fry on top of the oven until set, then put inside for ten minutes. Serve hot.

Creamed Fried Tomatoes.—Flour, a tablespoonful of cornstarch, salt, one pint of milk, pepper, butter to make a cream dressing. Fry the tomatoes Virginia style, but dip the slices into flour instead of covering with cracker crumbs. When done make a cream dressing of the milk, cornstarch, pepper, salt and a lump of butter the size of an egg. Draw the frying pan to the edge of the stove and pour this mixture over the fried tomatoes. As soon as it thickens pour all onto a deep platter and serve.

Stuffed Tomatoes Chilled.—Twelve tomatoes, one quarter pound of almonds, one-half can of mushroom salt, cayenne pepper, one-half pint of chopped chicken, one-half cupful of pine nuts, a truffle dressing. Peel and take out the inside of the tomatoes. Mix together the finely-chopped chicken, the almonds cut into pieces, pine nuts, mushrooms and truffle. Season with salt and pepper; fill the tomato cups and serve with a mound of any rich dressing on the top of each. Chill before adding the dressing to the tops.

Hot Stuffed Tomatoes.—Celery salt, one ounce of breadcrumbs, four ounces of minced chicken, one desiccated onion, one-half can of mushroom salt, one-half pint of tomato juice, two tablespoonfuls of tomato catsup, one teaspoonful of chili vinegar, pepper, one ounce of butter, one ounce of ham, white one-half of hard-boiled egg, a few drops of cayenne onion. Put the butter and breadcrumbs into a saucepan and add enough of the stock to moisten the bread. Stir all over the fire until light paste is formed; then add the chicken, ham, onion, celery salt and pepper. Cut round pieces from the tops of tomatoes, and with the handle of a spoon remove the seeds and turn the tomatoes on a plate to drain. Chicken with the mixture, put in a buttered pan and cook in a quick oven. A few minutes before they are done place a teaspoonful of the beaten white of an egg on each and let it cook till the egg is set. Place the tomatoes on a dish and put around each a row of dice-shaped pieces of toast. Then pour also around the dish a sauce made of tomato juice, tomato catsup, cayenne and chili vinegar, thickened with browned flour. Last thing before pouring on the dish, stir into this a teaspoonful of butter.

Preservative of Youth.

None of the nature studies requires much money or time. A cheap illustrated guidebook, an opera glass, and, if possible, some walks and talks with an expert, and you will learn almost immediately to identify a score or more of flowers, or birds, or constellations, or mushrooms, and you will have found a hobby on which you may ride away from Death. Try it, young men, lest you grow old. Try it, old men, before you grow tired. Escape into the open from these narrow indoor days and learn the way to where the wild folk dwell. In their land you will find the help of the hills, and hope wide as the world, and strength, and youth, and happiness. Try it.—Samuel Sewall, Jr., in Lippincott's Magazine.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

When a woman who is running a home does all her own work she will eventually find that the two words that are the greatest reward to her are "Every day talks to every day people." One little aid to system is a kitchen calendar with a sheet of paper for every day in the year. If made with a hole on each side of the paper, punched one-half inch from the top, it will not tear easily and when strung on a cord the leaves turn with small effort. Some there are, who claim they would not waste time in keeping a calendar or memorandum of any sort, but if you give it a fair trial you will always be in favor of it—for it keeps so many things for you, in plain black and white, and saves you much confusion of mind.

If you outline a weekly schedule and put it down on one of the pages it will give you the opportunity to concentrate your mind on the work of the hour. When you can do it until you grow weary, but the truth still stares us in the face—we do one thing with our hands, projecting our minds, say an hour ahead, and do, via the route of anticipation, another task. Then we wonder why we are so tired, and we stop to consider the reason is plain. You do not see a man do this. At least not a successful man. He goes to work in the morning, rolls up his sleeves and buckles into the task before him. He does not look ahead and wonder what he will do when this batch of work is turned out. He just keeps busy, systematically so, and he makes good. The same principle can be worked out in the home, by simply telling yourself that while you will plan ahead, you will not worry ahead.

The mental energy wasted by looking into the future, always with pessimistic eyes, is almost beyond comprehension. When you reason sanely and face the fact that you have no leopards' life, you chide yourself for this little trick—but do you quit it? In justice to your home and family you should.

If to the words system and management you add the word friction with the idea firmly in mind of eliminating all possible friction from your business of running your home you will have taken a long step in the right direction. A good business is like a good machine; it is well oiled and each part working in harmony with the other. If you mean to be a good homemaker, study this subject of friction; a wee bit and plan not to allow rubs and irritations. Under this head can be mentioned good manners in the home. Can you not find a place called "etiquette" in the war zone? And all because of the gentleness of manner is saved for the outsider. To many of us it seems a waste of time to be courteous at home, and to be kind, thoughtful, generous to our own—why how absurd! Good manners are a sign of self-respect as well as of intelligence and if you are, in the managing of a home, also raising a family, you cannot afford to be anything but courteous. Mind that every action brings a result; that children in the formative period are the most wonderful, precious things this world has, we might apply a little more system, and management and try to eliminate friction from the running of our homes and the raising of our families.

The woman who has children can stand silently, inside the room, and think: Here is my life's work. Brighter stars shine outside, but the atmosphere that I create and maintain in this home will go down through the ages. Talk about there being no limit to a man's possibilities—Bah! We have them beat.

A bill designed to discourage American heiresses from marrying titled foreigners has been introduced in Congress by Representative Bowdle of Cincinnati. He proposes that whenever any citizen of the United States marries an alien bearing any title of nobility or aristocratic caste from any foreign government, an internal revenue tax of 25 per cent shall be levied annually against the income of such a citizen.

"Think of what money could be put into the treasury from the marriages such as the two Goulds, Stollons, Vanderbilts, Thaw, Shonts, Zimmermans and now the two Stollons," says Mr. Bowdle.

FRENCH ENGINEER CLAIMS CANAL WILL HAVE TO BE SEA-LEVEL FOR SUCCESS.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Panama, August 15.—After having completed the better part of a week in an extended examination of the Panama Canal, Philipp Bunau-Varilla, executive engineer for the defunct New French Panama Canal Company, is still of the opinion that ultimately the construction of a sea-level canal. He declares that at the end of the first 10 years of operation of the present canal it will be found necessary to reconstruct that waterway in order to take care of the increased traffic that will use it.

Bunau-Varilla is emphatic in his statement that within 20 years the present Panama Canal will have reached the limit of its carrying capacity, 30,000,000 tons annually, and that then it will be found that a sea-level canal will adequately take care of the traffic. The former executive engineer makes it plain, however, that he does not mean to discourage the construction of the present lock canal, but maintains that this is merely the secondary period in the construction of a waterway across the isthmus.

Bunau-Varilla has spent most of his time since his arrival on the isthmus in making voyages of inspection along the canal. In May of this year, he was the guest of Col. George W. Goethals, governor of the Panama Canal, who explained the work to his distinguished visitor.

He has made a number of motor-boat trips through the Culebra Cut and Gatun Lake. Besides this, he spent many hours in a careful examination of the Gatun Dam and the Spillway, and watching the work at Cucaracha. He was taken from dredge to dredge and chatted with many of the workmen. He was considerably impressed with the capacity for work shown by the huge 15-yard dipper dredges, both of which are actively engaged in pushing back the hitherto stalling toe of the slide.

DESIGN NATIONAL FLAG TO FLY OVER ICELAND

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Copenhagen, August 15.—A band of Icelandic patriots have designed a national flag which they propose to fly over Iceland but on all vessels registered in that country. If they had been content to make their flag a strictly local affair, for which permission had already been granted by the Danish king, all would have been well. But the Danish parliament has now taken up the question of the marine flag on account of the activities of the Icelandic "independence" party.

The people of Denmark are of a divided opinion as to Iceland. Some feel that the Icelanders are acting in a very ungrateful way in view of past favors, and others that to give Iceland its freedom would rid the country of a source of useless expense.

Iceland's new flag is of navy blue field, marked with a white cross whose arms extend to the four sides, and a cardinal red cross of half the size set within the white.

It was not until after the state council approved the Icelandic home flag, following negotiations between the Icelandic minister and the Danish prime minister, that the agitation was taken up by the patriots for its use as a commercial and marine emblem. The Icelanders cannot have their new colors recognized by foreign powers as a national flag without the consent of the Danish parliament.

PACIFIC COAST FARMERS PURCHASE ENGLISH CATTLE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, August 15.—For the purpose of improving the breed of cattle in the Pacific northwest, some important purchases of English cattle have been made here for James J. Hill. One shipment is of fifty dairy shorthorn bulls, which will be given away to as many counties in that section of the country. Each one of these bulls is born of a cow with a milk record of 20,000 pounds or more the year.

Besides the gift of these blooded animals to the farmers of the northwest, a herd of ten cows and a bull of South Devon, the first to be imported to America, will be sent to Hill's Minnesota farm as well as two prize winning dairy shorthorns to his North Dakota farm.

The purchases were made by Prof. Thomas Shaw, the well known expert of Minnesota. According to Eugene Grubb, the United States livestock commissioner now in England, this is the most important shipment of blooded cattle ever made to America from England and will mean a great improvement in the cowbreed in the northwest both for milk and beef purposes.

TO EXTEND AMERICAN MISSION HOSPITAL TO WORLDLY INSTITUTION

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Tokio, August 15.—Great interest has been caused by the announcement that the American Episcopal Mission Hospital at Tokyo, known as St. Luke's, will soon be extended into a modern international institution. Already a large sum of money has been contributed in the United States for this purpose, and headquarters at New York and an American Women's auxiliary board will help make the project successful. The latest step is the organization of a Japanese council, with Premier Count Okuma as president, which promises to furnish land for the hospital.

The institution was founded 14 years ago by Dr. Rudolf B. Tiesler, who came from Richmond, Va., as a missionary doctor. It is now an institution of 80 beds with a staff of three foreign and 10 Japanese doctors, a nurses' training school with 40 pupils and a medical society of about 50 Japanese members. The professors of the medical department of the Imperial University are consultants to the hospital.

Foreigners throughout Japan as well as members of the embassies and legations avail themselves of the hospital. The project is to erect a new institution on the pavilion plan at a total estimated cost of $485,000.

BLIND STUDENTS HAVE BOAT RACE IN ENGLAND; ROWING FAVORITE SPORT

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Worcester, Eng., August 15.—Four blind schoolboys, pulling with a clean steady stroke, recently won a race here on the Severn against a crew of four blind men. The victors belonged to the Worcester College for the Blind and their rivals were former pupils. Out of this has resulted a rowing boom at the school, and three "fours" are now in training out of the thirty boys. They hope to enter next season for the public school cup at the Molesey Regatta.

The boys were trained by their headmaster, G. C. Brown, who, having eyes, acted as coxswain.

"The beginning was the hardest part," says Mr. Brown. "First, they had to feel all over the boat and the oars, while I explained things to them. We trained in a 'tub' with outriggers and fixed seats. But once they learned the feeling of the water, they picked up the stroke easily. Their keen sense of hearing and the movement of the boat enables them to keep perfect time."

No form of athletics introduced at the school has been taken up as eagerly by the boys as rowing.

SIXTY-ONE THOUSAND AT GERMAN COLLEGES

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Berlin, August 15.—Almost 61,000 students were enrolled at Germany's twenty-one universities in the last semester, and 4,000 more attended certain lectures without being regularly inscribed. The smallest university, that of Rostock, has twice more than a thousand students, and the University of Berlin leads with 8,533. Only 5,000 of the 61,000 were women. Recalling the outcry of last year of two against foreign students, one is surprised to find that there were only 6,000 foreigners enrolled. Medicine attracts the greatest number students, but philosophy, philology and history are not far behind. Most of the universities are crowded.

USE BILLBOARDS SINGS IN "KILL THE FLY" CAMPAIGN IN DENMARK

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Copenhagen, August 15.—On the billboards of Copenhagen appears the sign, "The most dangerous of all animals is not the lion, the tiger or the reptile but—the fly." This is the means Herr Falck uses in waging a campaign against flies.

Herr Falck is the bitterest enemy the fly has in Scandinavia, and his one ambition is to see a flyless Denmark. To preach his new crusade, he has organized in Copenhagen the first complete fly exhibition in the world. It contains every kind of weapon yet invented for trapping, poisoning or smashing flies. Most of these contrivances come from the United States.

An old superstition that Herr Falck hopes to rid the people of is that a Christmas fly brings good luck. A Christmas fly, according to Herr Falck is the potential mother of 195,312,000,000 descendants in the course of the summer season.

OVER SEVEN MILLION PEOPLE CLIMBED ALPS ON FUNICULAR RAILWAY

Geneva, August 15.—More than 7,500,000 persons climbed the Alps by funicular railways last year according to the statistics just published. There are now 48 of these mountain railways, and the authorities have before them demands for seven more. If this continues every Alp will have its funicular in the future.

BRUSSELS TURNS MOTHERS' DAY INTO RELIEF MEETINGS.

Brussels, August 15.—Today was to have been the first annual celebration of Mothers' Day. Instead at the meetings throughout Belgium these attending planned to enroll every woman and every man unable to fight for the Fatherland in an organization to aid the government in succoring the wounded and assisting the families of the slain.

SUGGESTS CONVERSE TO DARWIN'S THEORY

ADVANCE WITH LOSS

Prof. Bateson Contends That Forms of Life May Have Come About by Subtraction Rather Than Addition.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Melbourne, Aug. 15.—Prof. William Bateson, president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, declared today in an intensely interesting address before that organization at its first meeting in Australia, that the old view of variations in forms of life proceeding from the simple to the complex might be completely turned about. The true process of evolution might be from the complex to the simple.

It will be remembered that at last year's meeting got the famous organization in Birmingham, Sir Oliver Lodge started the scientific world with the bold introduction of a proposal for closer investigation into the "life after death" theory. Today Prof. Bateson, with perhaps less pronounced opinions, urged his fellow scientists to open their minds to the possibility that Evolution came largely "by loss" rather than by addition.

From a lay standpoint his observations might be summarized as follows: In contradiction of Darwin and of most scientists who have accepted the belief that contemporary variations in the forms of life have come about wholly by crossing, and thus by the addition of new factors of life, it is probable that the variations are due to the loss or suppression of factors present in the original species.

A pointed sentence was this remark: "I have confidence that the artistic gifts of mankind will prove to be due not to something added to the make-up of the ordinary man, but to the absence of factors which in the normal person inhibited the development of these gifts."

Prof. Bateson's subject was "Hereditarity." Of this he has made a particular study for many years. He will be remembered by some in the United States as Billman lecturer at Yale university seven years ago. The stand he took in his address today was not that of a proponent of a theory. The time for the development of theories of the origin of life had not yet come he said; "the student of genetics would rather stick to the seed-pan and the incubator."

But in the face of what had been learned since the time of Mendel, of plants and animals, the scope claimed for Natural Selection, as a determining factor in the fixity of the Species, as pronounced by Darwin, "must be greatly reduced."

New Forms Through Loss.
"The doctrine of the survival of the fittest," he said, "is undeniable so long as it is applied to the organism as a whole, but to attempt by this principle to find value in all definite names of parts and functions, and in the name of science to see fitness everywhere is mere eighteenth century optimism. Yet it was in application to the parts, to the details of specific difference, to the spots on the peacock's tail, to the coloring of the orchid flower, and hosts of such examples, that the potency of Natural Selection was urged with strongest emphasis. Shorn of those professions, the doctrine of the survival of favored races is a truism, helping scarcely at all to account for the diversity of species."

"The appearance of contemporary variability proves to be an illusion. Variation from step to step in the series must occur either by addition or by the loss of a factor. Now, of the origin of new forms by loss, there seems to me to be fairly clear evidence, but of the contemporary acquisition of any new factor I see no satisfactory proof, though I admit there are rare examples which may be so interpreted. I have before me a picture of variation utterly different from that which we may at first, variation now stands out as a definite physiological event. We have done with the notion that Darwin came later to favor, that large differences can arise by accumulation of small differences. Such small differences are often mere ephemeral effects of conditions of life, and as such are not transmissible."

Variation by Crossing.
The speaker referred to the contention by Ledy that the sole source of variation was by crossing, but declared this was unsafe ground. "In spite of repeated trials no one has yet succeeded in crossing the sweet pea with any other leguminous species," he argued. The Picotee sweet pea, with its purple edges, can surely be nothing but a condition which ordinarily makes the fully purple flower, quantitatively diminished. The pied animal, such as the Dutch rabbit, must similarly be regarded as the result of partial defect of the chromogen from which the pigment is formed, or conversely the factor which affects the oxidation. On such lines I think we may with confidence interpret all those intergrading forms which breed true and are not produced by factorial interference.

Having in view these and other considerations which might be developed, I feel no reasonable doubt that though we may have to forego a claim to variations by factors, yet variation both by loss of factors and by fractionation of factors is a genuine phenomenon of contemporary nature. If then we have to dispense, as seems likely, with any addition from without we must begin seriously to consider whether the course of Evolution can at all reasonably be represented as an unpacking of an original complex which contained within itself the whole range of diversity which living things present. I do not suggest that we should come to a judgment as to what is or is not probable in these respects.

Expounds No Theory.

"As I have said already, this is no time for devising theories of Evolution, and I propound none. But as we have got to recognize there have been an Evolution, that somehow or other the forms of life have arisen from newer forms, we may as well ask whether we are limited to the old view that evolutionary progress is from the simple to the complex, and whether after all it is conceivable that the process was the other way about. I ask you simply to open your minds to this possibility. It involves a certain effort. We have to reverse our habitual modes of thought. At first it may seem rank absurdity to suppose that the primordial form or forms of protoplasm could have contained complexity enough to produce the divers types of life. But it is easier to imagine that these powers could have been covered by extrinsic additions. Of what nature could these additions be? Additions of material cannot surely be in question. "That primordial life may have been of small dimensions, need not disturb us. Quantity is of no account in these considerations. Shakespeare once existed as a speck of protoplasm not so big as a small pin's head. To this nothing was added that would not equally well have served to build up a baboon or a rat."

Changes by Removal.
"Let us consider how far we can get by the process of removal of what we call 'epigenetic' factors, in other words those that control, mask, or suppress underlying powers and faculties. I have spoken of the vast range of colors exhibited by the modern sweet pea. There is no question that these have been derived from the one wild bicolor form by a process of successive removals. When the vast range of color in the sweet pea is considered, it seems difficult to suppose that all this variety is hidden in the wild crab-apple. I cannot positively assert that this is so, but I think all familiar with the Mendelian analysis would agree with me that it is probable, and that the wild crab contains presumably inhibiting elements which the cultivated kind have lost."

"I have confidence that the artistic gifts of mankind will prove to be due not to something added to the make-up of an ordinary man, but to the absence of factors which in the normal person inhibit the development of these gifts. They are almost beyond doubt to be looked upon as releases of power normally suppressed. The instrument is there, but it is 'stopped down.'"

Outcome is Negative.
"Somewhat reluctantly, and rather from a sense of duty, I have devoted most of this address to the evolutionary aspects of genetic research. We cannot keep these things out of our heads, though sometimes we wish we could. The outcome, as you will have seen, is negative, destroying much that till lately passed for gospel. Destruction may be useful, but it is a low kind of work. We are just about where Boyle was in the seventeenth century. We can dispose of alchemy, but we cannot make more than a guess-chemistry. We are awaiting our Priestly and our Mendeleev. In truth it is not these wider aspects of genetics that are at present our chief concern. They will come in time. The great advances of science are made like those of evolution, not by imperceptible mass-improvement, but by the sporadic birth of penetrative genius. The journeymen follow after him widening and clearing up, as we are doing along the track that Mendel found."

COMPLETE CENSUS OF CANAL ZONE CITIZENS.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Panama, August 15.—A new census of the Canal Zone has just been completed by the Canal Police. The total population was found to be 37,961, composed of 10,970 Americans and 27,991 Aliens. A comparison with the figures of the census of February, 1914 shows that during the interval 7,335 persons have departed from the Canal Zone. The previous census showed a total population of 45,296 of whom 9,995 were Americans and 35,301 were Aliens.

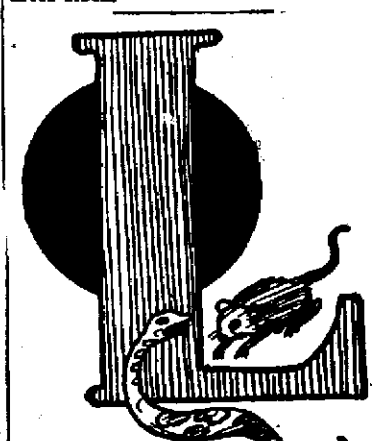

HOLD SMALL PROSPECTS FOR GROUSE SHOOTING IN ENGLAND THIS YEAR.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, August 15.—The grouse shooting season opened in Great Britain, on August 12, but the prospects are for smaller bags than usual owing to two misfortunes. The cold spell of last spring wiped out the early broods in certain areas and destroyed the clutches of eggs in exposed places. In southern and eastern Scotland, a mysterious disease, believed to be due to the bad weather and unsuitable food, destroyed many birds. Worst of all, was the loss of about half of the breeding stock.

WILL BUILD FOURTEEN LIGHTHOUSES IN PANAMA

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Panama, August 15.—Work will be begun soon on the construction of 14 small lighthouses for the Panama Government. The work will be done by private contractors. All of the lighthouses will be on the Pacific Coast and will be a distinct aid to the navigation of these waters, especially to the small coast traders that make the Port of Panama their home port. The lighthouses will be located as follows: One at the entrance to Panama Bay, one on Melon Island, one at San Carlos, one at Port Obaldia, one at Port Posada, two at Aguadulce, one at Chitre at the entrance to the Villa river, two at Monabe, one at Santa Lucia River, and two on Lisartes Rock.

TRADE CONDITIONS
IN SOUTH AMERICA
CRIPPLED BY WAR

Director of Pan-American Union
Urges States to Come to Assistance With Ships and Money.

The European war has developed such a critical situation in South America that Director General John Barrett of the Pan American Union, in his capacity as an international officer—that is, an officer representing South American countries as well as of the United States—makes the following urgent appeal to the commercial and financial interests of the United States:

“As the executive officer of the Pan American Union, the organization of the American republics devoted to the development of commerce, friendship, intercourse and good will among them all, I appeal to the banking, shipping, manufacturing, exporting and importing interests of the United States to give at this moment every possible aid and attention to the critical South American situation brought on by the European war.

“While everybody must profoundly regret that a condition of war and the sufferings of European nations engaged in a great conflict should in any way be exploited for the selfish gain of the United States, its business interests have a duty and responsibility in this crisis which must be met even if it may bring them vast material benefits. Looking at the situation in a thoroughly unselfish way, it presents demands upon the United States from South America which cannot be neglected, but which, if responded to in the right spirit, will be enormously beneficial to South America and the United States alike. The problem divides itself into four heads—imports, exports, ships and loans.

South American Imports.

“All South America is an enormous market for the manufactured products of Europe. A large portion of this supply will be shut off during the next six months and possibly during the next year or two if the war continues. As a result, the South American countries depend largely upon Europe for its absolute necessities, and a major part of these orders are placed but a short time ahead because of the excellence of the regular shipping facilities, they are now face to face with an immediate famine in the articles which they most generally import. According to the latest available figures collated in the Pan American Union, the ten South American countries—Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, and Venezuela—annually import products valued at $861,000,000. Of this there come from Europe products valued close to $600,000,000. While Great Britain supplies products of this total to the value of approximately $273,000,000, Germany, which is completely cut off by war, supplies $180,000,000. France, $84,000,000; Italy, $54,000,000; Belgium, $47,000,000; Austria-Hungary, $3,000,000; Netherlands, $3,000,000; Switzerland, $6,000,000, and other European countries lesser sums. For comparison it can be stated that the average imports from the United States of these ten countries of South America amount to approximately $158,000,000. Bearing the fact in mind that the commercial relationship of South America and Europe has been so well organized and systematized that seventy-five per cent of these imports are only ordered and shipped in the month or two only ordered, it can be realized how soon the present supplies on hand in South America will be exhausted and that she must depend upon the United States to make up the deficiency. If the United States manufactures and exporters will exert every effort to supply this emergency demand without delay they will be doing a great permanent good for themselves and the South American business interests alike.

South American Exports.

“The same compilation of figures shows that South America annually exports to foreign countries products valued at approximately $1,770,000,000. Of this total nearly $700,000,000 go to Europe. The United States takes approximately $270,000,000; Germany, $157,000,000; France, $104,000,000; Belgium, $60,000,000; Netherlands, $44,000,000; Italy, $27,000,000; Austria-Hungary, $22,000,000; and the remaining amount divided among different countries. For comparison it can be stated that these ten countries of South America annually export to the United States valued at approximately $250,000,000.

“With, therefore, their principal markets for their raw products temporarily closed against them, these countries are looking for a place to dispose of their accumulating stores, and if the importing interests of the United States decline the manufacture of raw material, can relieve the situation by increasing their purchases, they may save the South American business interests from a financial crisis.

Ships for South American Trade.

“As nearly ninety per cent of the exports and imports of these South American countries are carried in German, British and other European bottoms, which are now withdrawn from the sea, all of their principal ports like Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Buenos Aires, Valparaiso, Callao and La Guayra are in a state equal to that of a formal blockade. The majority of these vessels will be absent for many months and possibly for several years unless the situation is quickly remedied. There is no limit to the suffering that will come to these countries and their exports and imports will be cut off. In this crisis it is to be sincerely hoped that the bill now being passed by the United States congress may be of great assistance in relieving the situation. That however, can only point out the way. There must follow the placing upon the high seas to operate between the United States and the principal South American ports a fleet of vessels flying the American flag, and this can only be done by United States companies taking advantage of this act of congress and carrying out the provisions of this bill.

National Loans.

“Just as war was declared several of the principal countries of South America were negotiating loans in the European financial capitals. These loans are inspired by the pressure of local conditions and are absolutely necessary for the welfare of countries concerned. For the present and probably for a long period it will be impossible to float such loans in Europe. Under the circumstances these governments will naturally turn to the banking and financial interests of the United States which heretofore have seldom subscribed for South American loans or shown much interest in them. By endeavoring to help out these governments in this crisis, they can not fail to perform not only a great service to such governments, but place themselves in a favorable position to obtain other loans in the future and favorable consideration from the governments concerned.

“In conclusion, it is gratifying to state that the department of commerce of the United States with commendable energy has already started an organization to relieve this situation, but far reaching results can

The pupils of District No. 3 are still wondering who their teacher will be, as the school board have no teachers hired yet.

ORFORDVILLE

Orfordville, Aug. 14.—Mrs. John Carver of Beloit spent Friday in the village. She was a guest at the George Pankhurst home.

Mrs. Oscar Millard, who has been critically ill here at Lima Center for the past few weeks, has so far recovered as to be able to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Mowe. She arrived on Thursday evening and will spend several days here.

Rev. P. Longseth of Princeton, Minnesota, is visiting at the home of Mrs. Longseth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, and other friends in the village.

Orfordville has furnished a good sized delegation for the Janesville fair each day. Interested spectators have gone both via automobile and railroad route.

The annual church picnic of the Plymouth church will be held on Friday of next week, August 21. There will be the usual attractions, such as a ball game, races and sports of various kinds and a general good time is anticipated. This is one of the times in which the church meets its financial obligations, and a large turnout is assured if the weather is fine.

A party of fishermen from Orfordville went to Janesville last Saturday and spent the night fishing. Of course they met with success.

Word has been received of the death of Nels O. Onsgard at his home in Spring Grove, Minnesota. Mr. Onsgard was a brother of the late O. Onsgard of this place, and has many relatives residing here.

One of Orfordville's citizens who attended the Janesville fair on Thursday had the misfortune to lose a large part of his pocketbook some time during the day. His only recollection of being crowded or jostled was when a woman crowded rather close and was very profuse in her apologies. The purse contained seven or eight dollars.

CLINTON

Clinton, Aug. 14.—John Cliff and his men are making rapid progress with the work of tearing out the front and interior of the old rink for the new Y. M. C. A. building.

Several of our people attended the Janesville fair this week and report it "a first class affair."

It is reported that W. W. Dalton, who recently purchased the D. M. Phillips livery stable for an implement sales room, has sold the property to White and Monroe, who own the livery and have an advance of $400 over his purchase price.

Rev. Catchpole was here Wednesday on business connected with the Wisconsin Children's Home Finding society.

The Misses Northrop visited Janesville yesterday.

The up to the minute books added to the public library yesterday should be read by every book-lover in Clinton.

E. P. Babcock delighted his many friends yesterday by returning home unexpectedly from southern Arkansas. He reports his son as greatly improved in health. Land is no longer so boom down there in price and the doctor stands to clean up a neat sum on his 340 acres if he chooses to sell.

William Cromwell Graeber is having his home repaired.

Mr. Ole Peterson died Wednesday afternoon at her home four miles southeast of town, after a lingering illness of about four months. She leaves to mourn her loss, five children and her husband, a sister, three two brothers, and a large circle of friends.

The ladies of the United Workers of the Congregational church gave one of the best suppers last evening ever given in Clinton for the price.

STABLE FLIES AND THEIR PREVENTION

The stockmen of north Texas, Oklahoma and the grain belt to the north are now confronted with conditions which may bring about a serious outbreak of stable flies similar to that experienced in north Texas and other parts of the grain belt in 1912. The so-called stable fly is the insect which closely resembles the house fly, but is capable of causing much more annoyance by its painful bite, which is inflicted with a sharp proboscis or beak. It is sometimes spoken of as the "biting house fly," "wild fly," or "straw fly." When it is not biting the insect is a pest to the farmer, as it is capable of causing much annoyance by its painful bite, which is inflicted with a sharp proboscis or beak. It is sometimes spoken of as the "biting house fly," "wild fly," or "straw fly." When it is not biting the insect is a pest to the farmer, as it is capable of causing much annoyance by its painful bite, which is inflicted with a sharp proboscis or beak. TWO WOMEN AVOID OPERATIONS

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Chicago, Ill.—"I must thank you with all my heart for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I used to go to my doctor for pills and remedies and they did not help me. I had headaches and could not eat, and the doctor claimed I had female trouble and must have an operation. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it and feel fine. A lady said one day, 'Oh, I feel so tired all the time and have headache.' I said, 'Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and she did and feels fine now.' Mrs. M. E. KANSCHNICK, 1438 N. Paulina Street, Chicago, Illinois.

The Other Case.
Dayton, Ohio.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound relieved me of pains in my side that I had for years and which doctors' medicines failed to relieve. It has certainly saved me from an operation. I will be glad to assist you by a personal letter to any woman in the same condition." Mrs. J. W. SEEBER, 126 Cass St., Dayton, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Here's a Jansville fact.

Lewis Gower, decorator, 1214 Miner, Point Ave., Jansville, says: "Handing points and turpentine probably started my kidney trouble and I had severe attacks of pain through my back. When I bent over, I had trouble in straightening again. My kidneys acted irregularly. It is also possible that riding a bicycle had something to do with bringing on the backache. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me. Since then my kidneys have been strong and haven't had any more pains or aches. I still use Doan's Kidney Pills once in while and they keep my kidneys in good shape."

Fine Feathers

Novelized from Eugene Walter's Drama by the same name.
By WEBSTER DENISON

Oh, it was intolerable, but it was nearly over. When she had helped Bob up to where he belonged she would go around to that pig of a meat dealer, buy a porterhouse and tender him a fifty-dollar bill. Then, while he was making change, she would give the steak to Dick—fox terrier Dick—and inquire if he had a better cut, one fit for her table. She would show these common islanders that she wasn't born or bred to dabble in pennies or be chased by bills.

The visualization of this glorious revenge relieved her. She called Dick took him in her lap and laughingly told him of the prospective feast. Dick had breakfasted on a single batter cake so, no doubt, he found his mistress' plan most commendable.

The postman's whistle recalled Jane to realities. She hurried to the door. There were four letters. Two were from tradesmen. She recognized the handwriting on the third as that of a girl friend. The fourth was in a plain but expensive envelope. The address was typewritten and the letter bore a special delivery stamp. Her heart beat rapidly as she broke the seal. She drew out a folded sheet of heavy linen stationery and as she opened it a yellow-back bill dropped to the floor. With a glad cry she stooped and picked it up. It was one hundred dollars. One hundred real American dollars all compressed into a little bit of paper; the first bill of that denomination she had ever seen, and it was all hers!

There was no writing on the folded paper. Not even a letterhead. It seemed to Jane that this was a bit of delicacy on Brand's part, but if he had known her thoughts at that moment one might have seen another of those rare and cynical smiles. The system has a way of doing such things. Good disciples of the creed do not write checks or even certificates of deposit unless the figures are for fabulous sums. And they do not ask receipts.

Also, Brand knew the lure of ready money. While he felt reasonably certain that the spider had stepped boldly into the web, he was too good a business man to not consider possibilities. He knew that at heart Jane was a loyal wife. Her quick revulsion when he had proposed stopping for refreshments revealed this. She might be weary of her irksome and humdrum life, but she was not weary of her husband. Nor had she lost materially, he thought, any of those finer feelings of a real woman. That "I cannot have you later" had rankled and hurt, but the wound would heal. There was always the chance that her husband's presence, his devotion, his innocent trust, would strike the chord of genuine sympathy that existed between them and bring a penitent confessor to his feet. She was willing to worship at Mammon's altar, but eventually her husband must kneel beside her. Brand knew. He knew a pigmy and he knew a worthy foe. The burglar prowling in the night knows the watchdog is loyal. He does not try cajolery with a soft whistle or kind words. He offers something more substantial—a bone with good gristle and a bit of meat.

That was Brand's bait—the bone, the gristle and not too much meat. Not enough to surfeit; just enough to gnaw on and leave the taste for more. Maybe, later when the taste had grown, when the bone seemed an unnecessary adjunct to the meat—well, time would tell.

With her hundred dollars tucked away in a safe place Jane sat down with pencil and paper to enumerate and dilate upon its purchasing power. There were so many things that she wanted and actually needed, yet she knew she must be guarded in her selections. Everything she bought would have to be accounted for as having been obtained through savings from her weekly allowance. And this would preclude the purchase of anything elaborate; anything that to the Jansville's eye would reveal its cost.

She must spread the money around here and there in comparatively small amounts.
But there must be a dress. That she would not be denied. She would have one made; her first tailored suit. It would take two or three weeks to get it and this would give her time to prepare for its arrival. Bob was no connoisseur on women's clothes and besides he never pressed her for details about her expenditures. He knew that she had wonderful taste and judgment though she had small opportunity for exercising it.

She took up the morning paper and scanned the ads. Lingerie. That was one solution. Men never could understand the cost of such bits of finery and how often she had longed for some of it. One of the stores, too, was advertising a special sale of broad-cloth motor coats with silk moire lining. Wouldn't that be grand for her business jaunts with Brand? But the price, sixty-eight fifty. That would never do. She would have to hide it as she had the hat and if Bob ever discovered it even his innocent credulity would be tasked to imagine that it was the fruit of household economy.

There were handsome silver purses with vanity cases. One of the kind she had wanted for a year. That would do for one thing. It was small and to a man would mean very little even if it was reduced from fifteen dollars to thirteen ninety-eight. Some tan suede ties to go with the new dress. Yes, they would be just the thing for the suit was going to be brown. She had worn that little old, blue serge, refined it, changed the collar and altered it generally until she hated it and never wanted to see a piece of blue cloth again. The ties were six dollars, but she would have them, anyway. Bob wouldn't know whether they cost six or two. They were just what she wanted, too. She hated high shoes, although for Staten Island, and with winter coming, they were far more practical.

She thought of Bob, too. It seemed to Jane that he had worn that faded tan suit ever since she could remember. Poor Bob! She wished she could hurry over to New York, tell him about their good fortune and divide the hundred with him. Of course, that was out of the question, but he would come into his own in the end and, in the meantime, he should share her new found wealth to some extent. She would buy him something; handkerchiefs, hose and some neckwear. Christmas and birthdays were the only time he boasted such luxuries for he never bought them for himself. Before she had finished with her list Jane found she had far exceeded the equivalent of her yellow-back. She had thought it would be hard to plan the expenditure of so much money at one time but now, without even stepping inside of a store, she had thought of a score of purchases and she found it necessary to prune and strike off half the articles she wanted.

She longed to go over and break the news of her good fortune to Mrs. Collins, but then she thought that would be unwise. Mrs. Collins was so peevish and narrow-minded that she misconstrued everything, including Brand's attentions and intentions. "I guess you won't be needing me as a chaperon much longer," she had said a few days ago and Jane was so enraged at the remark that she felt as if she could chastise her. But Mrs. Collins would have been fully able to avert such a catastrophe. No one had ever found such a thought father to the deed with her; not even dear James.

No, Jane was powerless. She had to have a chaperon and her neighbor was the only one she could trust. Despite Mrs. Collins' proclivities for gossip, she felt that she could trust her, for in such little intrigues as this the good woman was exactly in her own element. So Jane's expression of resentment had been confined to harsh words that brought tears and apologies and a reconciliation.

She dressed hurriedly now in the irrepressible blue serge and started for New York alone. On her way to the car she stopped suddenly in front of her grocer's. The monthly account there remained unsettled. An idea occurred to her. Perhaps her plan for revenging herself on the butcher hadn't been so visionary after all. Why not awe the grocer by revealing the prosperous state of her finances and forestall another scene with Bob. She was sure the man could find no way of telling her husband that she had presented a hundred dollar bill. Besides, Bob seldom went into the place.

She entered with a cheerful "Good morning" to which the merchant responded with a salutation not quite so cordial. He was thinking of $17.43 and of the fact that it was seven days past the first of the month. But her next words brought such a transformation of manner that Jane smiled in spite of herself.

"I want to pay the bill, Mr. Nolte," she informed him. "I neglected to bring it with me. Would you mind looking it up?"
He wouldn't mind at all and although the figures were quite vividly impressed on his mind he went through the pretense of examining his books and presently told her the amount. She held out the yellow-back, at which Mr. Nolte's best store smile broadened, then waned and finally vanished into a blank stare of hopeless disappointment. He didn't have the change. It was so early in the day, he told her, but if she didn't mind waiting for a minute or so he would have Fritz mind the store while he tried to break the bill at Mr. Hoffenbach's across the way. But she did mind. She was in an awful hurry. She had an appointment in the city and was late now. Of course, tomorrow would do, he reluctantly admitted and he proceeded with much alacrity and renewed amiability to take a substantial order that she found time to give.

Jane left the store in high spirits. Money was indeed power. She opened her purse and looked at the bill again while she waited for the car. The sight of it thrilled her. Oh, why was there any such thing as poverty? Here in this little strip of crisp paper was the key to life's real joys; it pointed the route and paved the way to escape from the bitter confines of her impecunious past. She had never a thought that it was not rightfully hers; that she had not earned it. She knew only that she had it. So the gambler, when he has won another man's money, revels in thoughts of how he will squander it and is buoyed up to the heights of all moral oblivion and freedom from care.

CHAPTER IX.
Jane in Her Own Element.
When she reached New York Jane did not head for the bargain counters of the big Sixth avenue stores. These were her rightful domain, or had been when she had gone to spend the few dollars that her own limited resources allowed. She rode now to one of the more exclusive Fifth avenue shops and proceeded to make such purchases as she wanted without regard to cost. The more she paid the better, for her plan of concealment would not permit of her buying too much, and, besides, she was through with the cheap and shoddy.

Everything in this store catered to the better tastes of the better class of people. Even the girls behind the counters were different. They were polite and suave, softer voiced and gentler mannered. None of them chewed gum and none of them called "cash" in shrill, repellent tones. Nor did any of them carry on a conversation with a companion 50 feet away to inform her friend that she had had a "perfectly awful time last night" and contemplated spending the ensuing evening with "Jimmie" testing joys unconfined at the skating rink.

Most of the floorwalkers were in keeping with the clerks. They were not dressed in long Prince Alberts as for an afternoon tea, nor did they twirl huge black mustaches. They were clean shaven and neat, and stood or walked about with some display of modesty as if they thought it possible that some of their millionaire customers were almost as disgusted in sign station as themselves.

Here was a house in order and Jane reveled in it. No more Sixth avenue for her; she would leave that to Mrs. Collins. For herself she was through with the hot polloi. She was not one of them and never had been except from necessity. She thought of her home in one of the larger cities upstate and of her life there when Bob had courted her five years ago. Her father was not rich, as wealth is regarded today, but he was a well-to-do and much respected attorney and an intellectual one. If the occasion had required it he would have taken lodging at a first-class hotel and done without a meal rather than stay at an inferior one.

Jane had had a year at one of the leading colleges for girls and then a turn in the tide of her father's business affairs had cut short this luxury. But she knew her art and her music and she had looked forward with a thrill and with wholesome anticipation to her advent in the great metropolis. She had an inkling of Bob's business then and business of any kind seemed better for a man to her than a profession. Her father's case convinced her of this. She was sure that no man was more capable, more suited to enjoy the best things of life or more eager to supply them for his family, but his calling did not seem to provide the means.

Magistrate (severely):—"Horse-whipping is the only suitable punishment for you and your kind. The idea of a man of your size beating a poor, weak woman like that!"

Prisoner—"But, your worship, she keeps irritating me all the time."
Magistrate—"How does she irritate you?"
Prisoner—"Why, she keeps saying: 'Hit me! Beat me! I dare you to hit me! Just hit me once and I'll have you hauled up before that baldheaded old reprobate of a judge and see what he'll do with you.'"
Magistrate (chokingly):—"Discharged."

A man with an uncanny mania for juggling with figures, producing a pencil and paper, commanded a friend to "put down the number of living brothers. Multiply by two. Add the number of living sisters. Multiply the result by ten. Add the number of dead brothers and sisters. Subtract 150 from the result." It was done.
"Now," he said, with a cunning smile, "the right-hand figure will be the number of living sisters, and the left-hand figure the number of living brothers."
And it was so.

CONFLICT TO STOP SPORT MATCHES OF NATIONS FOR YEARS

European Strife Likely to Dampen Andor for International Sports in Years to Come

New York, Aug. 15.—A striking illustration of the international character of amateur sport is afforded by the situation that has developed as a result of the war in Europe. Early in the season there was every reason to believe that 1914 would be the greatest year in the history of competition. With the unexpected outbreak of the war, however, all hands have been cancelled and may not be resumed for months or even years.

On this side of the Atlantic the Amateur Athletic Union is in a most important position. It is the only organization that will lose the foreign entries that were expected. The amateur and open golf championships and the national tennis tournaments will be postponed until after the war. The Davis cup teams now in this country plan to leave for home as soon as the challenge round is completed. Abroad the Harmsworth motorboat contest and the international regatta at Rheims are off as well as all the various national championships of the European countries.

The result of the war from an athletic and sporting standpoint may be regarded as a disaster. It is scheduled for several years to come. The Sonder boat races at Kiel in 1915 and the Olympic games at Berlin in 1916 are no longer assured fixtures. Athletic authorities are realizing that the present war continues for any extended period Germany will not be in a position to act as host to the Olympic teams. Entries from all the European countries will be abandoned entirely and it may be necessary to postpone the games or transfer the meet to some nation not involved in the clash of arms.

It is of course too early to predict the effect of the war abroad on the Olympic games of 1916. Personally I hope that Europe will be at peace again before that time and that there will be a shift in the championship of the world. A shift is necessary in the United States is the logical country in which to hold the games and the American Committee will carry out the championship of the world.

Without a hitch of any kind. We have available stadiums in many parts of the country several of which are capable of seating from forty to sixty thousand spectators. Should the war continue for any extended period the Panama-Pacific Exposition planned for San Francisco next year until 1916, the Olympic games would undoubtedly be held there in connection with the fair. If the championship is held according to schedule Chicago, Pittsburgh, New York and Boston are all available for the following year. New Haven and Syracuse with their big college stadiums might also be considered.

Next week professional and amateur golfers will have an interesting competition on the links of the Midlothian Country Club, Blue Island, Ill. In the four days open championship tournament of the United States Golf Association. Last year this event was decided over the course of the Country Club, Brookline, Mass., and the Metropolitan Country Club, New York. A young Massachusetts player over Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, a pair of Great Britain's leading professionals, in the play off, won the championship. The player was ranked as a star performance in American golf annals. The trio had tied with scores of 204 each for 72 holes, but in the play off, the following day, the event will not be decided. A wonderfully strong game, winning out with a round of 72 strokes while Vardon and Ray finished as named with 77 and 75 respectively. This year, however, the event will not be decided. ations which, although disrupted for a long time owing to the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, culminated in a match between the British Isles and American teams at the Longwood Cricket Club's grounds, Boston, August 8 and 10, 1900, which was won by the Americans, M. D. Whitman, Dwight F. Davis, and Hecleome Ward, the British players being A. Black, and Roper Barrett and E. D. Black. England was unable to send a team here the following year but they did so in 1902 and again America won. In 1903, however, the Doherty brothers with them and it remained there until the trophy and took it to England in 1907 when it was won by the Australian team who retained it until 1912 when the British won it again only to relinquish the bowl to the Australians with the open contest decided the amateur championship. American golfing blue ribbon, will attract the attention of every player of note in the country. This year's contest, the State Golf Association has selected the links of the Kewauok Country Club, Manchester, Vt., from August 1 to September 5, for the twentieth annual competition for the title of champion. The team of D. Travis, of the Upper Montclair, N. J., the present though the champion has not taken part in any public match or tournament since his return from his recent tour in quest of British honors on the other side of the Atlantic, Travis has been keeping in close touch with the games. The entries for the event will not close until a week from next Saturday. Last year two foreign transients were among those who carded for the national contest at Garden City, but this year for obvious reasons the field will be entirely American in its makeup.

You are hereby notified that a Summons and Garnishee has been issued against you and your property garnishee to satisfy the demand of J. E. Gokey, amounting to $33.06; now unless you shall appear before C. H. Lange, a Justice of the Peace in and for said County at his office in said city of Janesville on the 4th day of September, 1914, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon and defend said action judgment will be rendered against you and your property sold to pay the debt.

J. E. GOKEY, Plaintiff.

Dated this 3rd day of August, 1914.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Aug. 15, 1874—Court street bridge will be passable tomorrow for foot passengers, which will be advantageous to church-going people.

We have been informed that it is highly probable that Burr Robbins will spend next winter in the city. Orders have been received to commence purchasing a large store of supplies, and we know of no place where the troop can be better cared for.

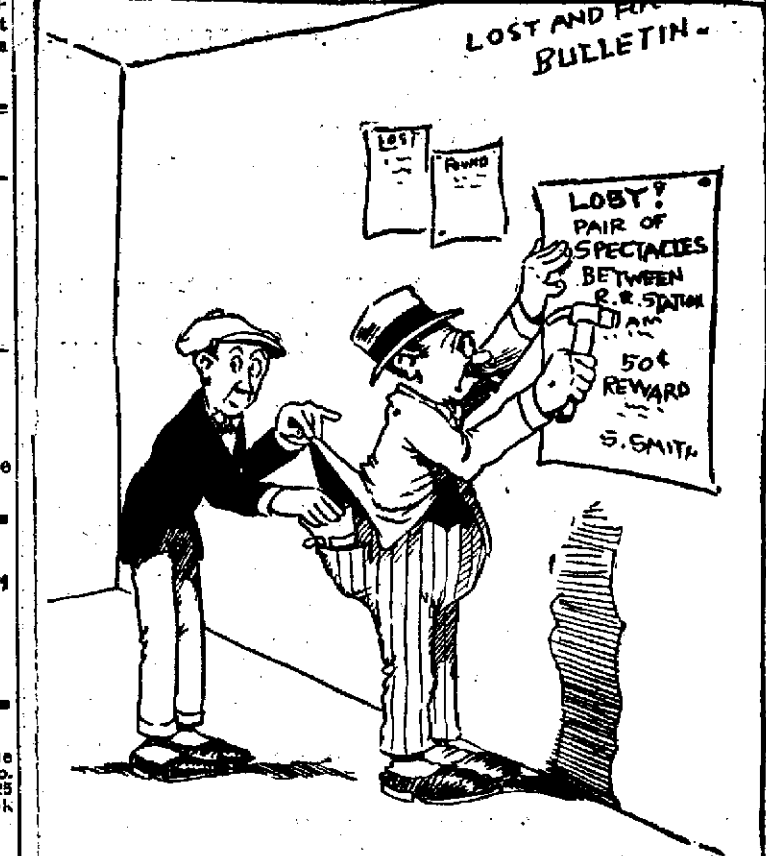

Very little doing in the market today—prices are declining, and in view of the probability of light yield everywhere, farmers attend to their work and reserve their products for better offers.

The council last night appointed a committee to arrange details under which an amount not to exceed $1.15 may be expended if necessary in connection with the game.

Money will change hands on the ball game today.

The game of quoits for $100 which was to have been played yesterday on the fair ground, between Frankie Bell of Racine street and John McArthur of Bradford was postponed, but may be looked for shortly. Due notice will be given.

And the Worst is yet to Come

A Cobblestone, Brick and Shingle Combination
By John Henry Newson

"Home of Character, No. 105-D"

In this adaptation of our original No. 105 field stone has been used for the spur walls to the steps and the foundation to the porch, while brick has been used for the balance of the chimney. The side walls are in shingles, as also the roof.

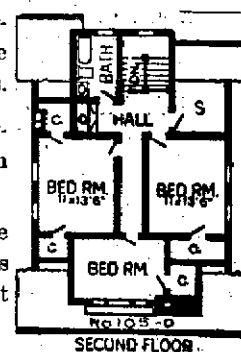

The vestibule and fireplace alcove are provided in this plan and the stair and kitchen arrangement is the same as No. 105-C, while the second floor plan will fit either of the two plans.

Variations in bathroom, side porch and storage room as indicated on No. 105-A and B can be made at option of purchaser.

This house should be built with a good-grade of plumbing fixtures, good furnace and first-class material and workmanship throughout for about $3,000.

The illustration shows the house with floor plan reversed. Plans can be had of any design reversed and desired features incorporated from any of the No. 105 series, in the design selected. For further information address John Henry Newson, HOMES OF CHARACTER DEPT., The Gazette.

How Long Will Your New Home Look Well?

There is one thing certain about your new home. It will be attractive. It will be in good taste. And, you want it to stay so as long as it stands.

There is little pride, enjoyment of satisfaction in a home that is not always pleasing to the eye in architecture and appointment.

To avoid the disappointment of seeing the beauty of your home fade, you need

Sturdy Building Materials

that look well at the start and keep their looks.

Select only the most suitable materials—every stick sound and strong clear through. Your home will then resist wear and weather for a long time. Its interior and exterior attractiveness will last because the material is rugged to the core.

Let us show you our large and very complete stock of building materials. Let us show you the most desirable material for each part of your home. Let us tell you why.

This puts you to no obligation. If you decide to buy here you will find everything as represented and guaranteed so that your house will give you satisfaction as long as it stands.

Model Kitchens

The modern idea is to have a kitchen light and airy. Anything that tends to make dust or dirt is carefully avoided by the progressive housewife.

Perhaps the best illustration of this tendency is the number of books and articles on domestic science that are constantly appearing. They all argue that if gas is available it is the cleanest, the best and the cheapest fuel to use in any kitchen.

The elimination of old devices and the installation of new up-to-date gas appliances transform a kitchen. People have become so enthusiastic over the "All Gas Kitchen" that they refer to them as model kitchens.

Let us give you an estimate of the installation of AN "ALL GAS KITCHEN" so that yours may be a "model kitchen."
